Troops Scout Idea That They Are Assembled Guly for Manoeuvres. Galveston, Texas, March 19.—Rain II in torrents at Fort Crockett last

Galveston, Texas, March 19.—Itain fell in torrents at Fort Creckett last night, and almost drowned out the 2.600 soldiers who arrived yesterday from the North on transports and spent the night under the inadequate shelter of their dog tents.

Though most of the soldiers were soaked to the skin, they came up smiling when the revielle sounded this morning, and entered with enthusiasm into the work of setting their camp in order.

"We had a pretty tough night of it." remarked one of taem, "but it wasn't nearly as bad as those eight days aboard the transport."

It seemed that the discomforts of the voyage were due more to the overcrowding of the ships than to rough weather. But all the hardships of the past ten days were forgotten by dinnerlime, when the men had their first meal in camp. The equipment for the men reached camp in the early afternoon, and wall tents soon began to spring up everywhere.

There was a great deal of black mud to contend with light hearts, joking and slinging as they went about their work. The troops from Fort Monroe and vicinity, forming the provisional regi-finity, forming the provisional regi-

As the correspondent sat with her in her drawing room at the Hotel d'Angleterre one of her military admirers called to ask for her photograph inscribed with some little message and her autograph. She promised, but the likeness of her own beautiful face did not happen to be handy. There was no photograph of herself or of anybody else in her room. She told the correspondent that she has not been photographed in more than a year, and when one of her imperial admirers asks her for her picture she has to send out and buy one.

Mine. Cavalieri admits suffering from nerves, for when her military visitor went out the clatter of his sword provoked her to clench her white hand against her temple. This and the lissitude that is the accompaniment of nerves are the legacy of her illness and disappointment last summer. Otherwise her matrimonial "misunderstanding" is not uppermost in her mind. She preferred not to talk of "him," but that was less from any wounded feeling than because she really feit the tople to be weartsome. There are gallants enough here to flatter any tender feeling, and some of them are friends of years.

HOUSE RUNS AWAY ON ICE.

Two-Story Building Blown Part Way Across Lake Champlain.
Westport, N. Y., March 19,—People living along the shore of Lake Champlain were treated on Thursday to the novel spectacle of a house running away across the ice. The owner of Willsboro Point, which juts far out into Lake Champlain at its widest part, opposite Burlington, Vt., wished to move a house to a site about half a mille further along the point. To move it over the land would be a laborious task and would make necessary the destruction of many shade trees. To disengage it from the foundation and W. Fred. Richardson's destruction of many shade trees. To disengage it from the foundation and push it down on the ley surface of the lake and slide it along to its new position was a much easier solution of the problem.

This was done, but while the workmen were erranging the skids to push it on to the land a sudden gale of wind came out from over the Adiron-tlack Mountains, struck the house, and it started at a lively galt up the lake. It took a southeasterly course for the Vermont shore, and was soon traveling at a forty-mile cilp over the frozen surface of the lake.

The sight of this forty-foot, two-story building as it twisted, tumbled han as long as he continues to give the dead-lock. When that conference adjourned it did so subject to the call of the chairman.

Speaker Frishie told Mr. Murphy yesterday only what the latter has heard from a majority of the up-State leaders, and from a majority of his own Tammany district leaders as well—that Mr. Sheehan should withdraw from the race in order to save the Democratic organization in this State and the Dix administration further and the Dix administration further combarrassment. Mr. Murphy has made a careful poil of the members of the Democratic State Committee and of the leaders in his own organization. While he has received assurances that they will stand with him for Mr. Shee-han the continues to give the word, nearly all of them have told the word have continues support of Mr. Sheehan will mean absolute ruin to the party.

Speaker Frisbie said, before he went to see Mr. Murphy, that there was a growing demand among the up-State Democratic state to the unit of the runaway. The louse fundly struck a ridge of ice which to see Mr. Murphy, that there was a growing demand among the up-State Democratic value of the unit of the senatorial contest.

We must have a Democratic verter of the party.

GERMAN ATTACKS

White Man Hits Booker Washington With Club and Is Arrested.

New York, March 19.—Upon com-plaint of Booker T. Washington, the well-known negro educator, a man was locked up by the police to-night, well-known negro educator, a man was locked up by the police to-night, charged with assault upon Dr. Washington. The latter received so severe a blow on his head from a club that he was at the Flower Hospital for over an hour late to-night having the wound dressed.

The trauble occurred in front of a Sixty-third Street house, at which Washington called about 10 o'clock to-night to see a friend, but no one answered his repeated calls on the doorbell. Thinking the man he wished to see might appear any moment, Washington walked up and down in the vicinity for more than half an hour, when his walk was interrupted by a man having the appearance of a janitor, who emerged with a big club in life hand, according to the complainant, and struck Washington.

Washington said he returned the blow with his fist, and held the man until the police arrived. The janifor acted, according to Washington, "as though he though I was a burglar."

The alleged assailant, who is a large German, gave his name as Albert Ulrich.

Ulrich told the police that he came

German, gave his name as Albert Ulrich.

Ulrich told the police that he came up from the basement with his club when his wife complained that a negro had been hanging around the hallway acting suspiciously. He walked up to the man and asked him what he wanted around there. No answer being given promptly, he grabbed the negro, ignorant that he was attacking the prominent educator. In the mix-up which followed, Ulrich wielded his club, and received the return blow which Washington admitted he struck. At the police station Washington made no admission of his own identity, and when he was forced to do so the officers at the station house were at first loath to believe him. Ulrich demanded the colored man's arrest, and proved his identity by cards and letters and given a full explanation of his presence in New York that the educator was allowed to go.

Washington was so afraid that exaggerated reports of the affair would reach the newspapers that he called up the Associated Press and rather belittled the incident.

"Were you badly hurt?" he was asked over the telephone.

"Not really hurt at all," was his reply.
